Dept. Code: HIS

Introduction

History is the systematic study of the past. The study of history includes training in how to gather information, how to research issues and problems, how to analyze data and construct arguments, and how to communicate ideas in writing. These are essential skills, tools that are prized in the world beyond the university. A major in history is an excellent beginning and solid stepping stone to professional school and the business world. For goals ranging from law to journalism, and from medicine to the MBA, history serves as a versatile undergraduate major. Multinational businesses demand that their executives understand the peoples and cultures around them, and be able to communicate that understanding effectively. If an occupation demands critical thinking and analysis, a background in history is invaluable.

Educational Objectives

All history courses expose students to historical interpretation and critical analysis.

- Courses at the 100 and 200 levels are intended as introductions to broad fields of history and are open to students with no previous college-level history experience.
- All 300 level history courses are writing intensive, are graded principally through essay examinations and short papers, and count toward the fulfillment of the University of Miami writing across the curriculum requirement.
- Courses at the 500 level require a 300 level history course as prerequisite. All 500 level courses deal extensively with the historiography of their particular subjects, and all require a written research project as a major component of the work of the course.
- To satisfy the College of Arts and Sciences writing requirement in the discipline, students majoring in History will take two 500-level History seminars.

Degree Programs

The major in History leads to the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Departmental Honors

History majors with a cumulative GPA of at least 3.6 in history courses may earn departmental honors by completing a two-semester-long, 500-level Honors seminar course HIS 597 and HIS 598, held in the Spring and Fall respectively. Admittance to the History Honors program is by application in the Fall semester during course registration week. Also, students must have completed at least 6 courses in History worth 18 credit hours at the University of Miami.

HIS 301. Miami Engagement: History, Media, and Social Change. 3 Credit Hours.
This seminar-style course will examine the history, theory, and practice of civic engagement, community history, and social change in the United States. We will look at four overlapping areas of interest: the meanings of civic engagement in American history; the roles of history and memory in shaping place and community; the role of the media in structuring stories about history and community; and grass-roots activism and its role in reinvigorating and reshaping public spheres in America. We will pay particular attention to the factors that have promoted inclusion and engagement, as well as those that have led to disenfranchisement and alienation. We will look at efforts by local, national, and even global activists to connect to communities large and small. And we will ask how the issues of memory, place, community, civil society, and global citizenship form a matrix around which to understand and shape broad-based collaboration among students, faculty, community residents, and civic organizations.
