MARKETING

Department Code: MKT

Introduction
Rapidly increasing global competition, emergence of new markets, and technological advancements make today's marketplace a highly dynamic and challenging environment for companies. Effective marketing is therefore crucial for organizations to survive and prosper in such an environment. Marketing is the process through which organizations develop and distribute products and services that satisfy the needs of customers. Customer satisfaction is critical to the profitable operations and growth of organizations and, as such, an integral component of modern-day marketing.

Educational Objectives
The primary goals of the Department of Marketing are:

1. to contribute to marketing knowledge through conducting scholarly research and disseminating the research findings through leading journals;
2. to excel in imparting marketing knowledge to students and honing their critical-thinking skills so as to prepare them for potentially successful careers in an increasingly competitive, dynamic, global, and service-and technology-oriented environment; and
3. to be of service to the business and professional communities at large.

The marketing curriculum offers courses and programs to undergraduate and graduate students for their professional development in domestic and world business.

A program of study in marketing offers students better understanding of and insights into:

• Marketing's role within the organization and society;
• The various 'markets' for goods and services through better identification and analysis of consumer needs, wants, and interests;
• Marketing's responsibility to society in legal, ethical, and moral matters;
• Methods, procedures, and techniques used in planning and managing marketing decisions.
