PH.D. IN LITERARY, CULTURAL, AND LINGUISTIC STUDIES

Overview

The Ph.D. in Literary, Cultural, and Linguistic Studies offers two major concentrations: 1) Literary and Cultural Studies and 2) Critical Studies of Language/Linguistics. Students in each concentration may opt to develop a secondary field of expertise in the other.

The program is designed primarily to prepare students for careers as university professors and research scholars. Students develop advanced language, teaching, and research skills that lend themselves to other professions, as well. A variety of geographic, temporal, and theoretical concentrations allow students to carry out innovative and interdisciplinary research projects, often with a transnational focus.

Admission Requirements

1. Your completed application must include the following (incomplete applications will not be considered): A completed application, including a detailed statement of purpose explaining your research interests and why is the Department of Modern Languages at the University of Miami a good place to pursue your graduate training. We only accept on-line applications. Apply on-line here (https://www.applyweb.com/miamigrd/).
2. Three substantial letters of recommendation.
3. Official transcripts from all colleges and universities attended.
4. A substantial writing sample in English.
5. Writing samples in the primary language(s) of study (French, Portuguese, and/or Spanish).
6. For international students only: TOEFL (http://www.toefl.org/) scores (please use Institution code 5815 and Department code 2699).
7. Application fee of $85.00.
8. GRE scores are encouraged but not required for admission (please use Institution code 5815 and Department Code 2699). However, they are required only in order to be nominated for University-wide fellowships.

Basic Curriculum Requirements

The requirements set out below for the Ph.D. in Literary, Cultural, and Linguistic Studies are minimum requirements. The Graduate Studies Committee, Director of Graduate Studies, and individual advisors may set additional requirements.

1. The requirements:
   a. for students entering on the “five-year plan” (with a B.A. or M.A., see below), passing satisfactorily a minimum of 60 graded credit hours in approved courses, 30 of which must be open to graduate students only;
   b. for students entering on the “four-year plan” (with an M.A. in a closely related field, see below), passing satisfactorily a minimum of 48 graded credit hours in approved courses, 24 of which must be open to graduate students only;
2. Passing MLL 701, MLL 711, MLL 799, and a minimum of 18 graded credit hours in the area(s) of research emphasis to be determined on an individualized basis in collaboration with the graduate advisors. 15 out of the 18 graded credit hours should be in MLL. However students may petition the GSC to take 3 more credit hours in an outside department only if the class directly relates to the student's research project.
3. For students in the Literary and Cultural Studies concentration, three credits of Critical Studies of Language/Linguistics and three credits in any Arts and Sciences discipline focusing on Colonial or Early Modern Studies (18th century or earlier).
4. At least six credits in an approved cognate discipline to be determined in consultation with graduate advisors.
5. Nine credits in Literary/Cultural Studies or Critical Studies of Language/Linguistics, for students pursuing an optional minor concentration.
6. In addition to proficiency in English and the major language of study, demonstrating the following:
   a. reading knowledge of two other languages; or
   b. holistic knowledge of one other language (for example, by passing the equivalent of a course at the 300-level). Note: Appropriate languages of study will be determined in collaboration with the student’s advisors (e.g. students of Latin America may be encouraged to study Portuguese or an indigenous language; students focusing on early modern Spanish or French studies may be encouraged to study Italian; students working in the French-speaking Caribbean many need to take Haitian Kreyol; etc.);
   c. if areas of specialization include Medieval, Early Modern, or Colonial Latin American Studies, students must demonstrate reading knowledge of Latin.
7. Passing a Breadth Exam. Depending on the student’s interests, the exam shall consist of three parts, according to one of the following configurations:
   a. one geographic region over three time periods;
   b. two geographic regions over two or three time periods;
   c. two geographic regions over one or two time periods and one area of critical sociolinguistics;
   d. two areas of critical sociolinguistics and one geographic region over one-time period. Note: Students entering the doctoral program with an MA in a relevant field may petition to waive the Breadth Exam (normally taken in the spring semester of the second year) after the first semester of study. The Graduate Studies Committee will consider petitions on an individualized basis.
8. Passing a Qualifying Exam on an approved topic. The exam typically includes three general approaches focusing on:
Ph.D. in Literary, Cultural, and Linguistic Studies

- literature, cultural studies, or sociolinguistics;
- critical theory;
- a cognate discipline (e.g. history, sociology, philosophy, law, art, film, etc.).

11. Satisfying the requirements of the Graduate School as stated in the Graduate Bulletin.

12. Students can also opt to complete two doctoral concentrations and/or one doctoral certificate while choosing courses to fulfill the requirements for the degree.

Concentrations

Graduate Concentration in Medieval and Early Modern Studies

The Medieval and Early Modern Studies Concentration is an interdisciplinary concentration to be earned in conjunction with the individual Ph.D. requirements for the departments of English, History, and Modern Languages and Literatures (Romance Studies, Spanish, and French). Graduate students will continue to be housed in any one of the three departments and must fulfill the requirements of their discipline. To qualify for the Concentration, students must successfully complete a minimum of two courses (6 credit hours) in medieval and/or early modern studies in one or both of the other two departments, substituting for courses within their department; and a minimum of two courses (6 credit hours) in medieval and/or early modern studies within their home department. Thus, for example, a student whose home department is MLL would need to take two courses in medieval and/or early modern studies in MLL and then either two courses in English or History or one course in English and one course in History. A list of courses for the academic year is posted regularly on the website of the Center for the Humanities (https://humanities.as.miami.edu/academic-programs/early-modern-studies-concentration/).

Graduate Concentration in Caribbean Studies

This is an interdisciplinary concentration to be earned in conjunction with the individual Ph.D. requirements for the departments of English, History, and Modern Languages. Ph.D. students pursuing the doctoral concentration take a minimum of two Caribbean-focused courses (6 credit hours) within their home department, and a minimum of two Caribbean-focused courses (6 credit hours) outside of their department.

Curriculum

Students pursuing the doctoral concentration in Caribbean Studies must take as part of their required course credit hours a minimum of four Caribbean-focused courses (12 credit hours) as shown below.

Certificates

Graduate Certificate in Digital Humanities in the Departments of English, History, and Modern Languages and Literatures

The Graduate Certificate in the Digital Humanities is an interdisciplinary concentration in Digital Humanities to be earned in conjunction with the individual Ph.D. requirements for the Departments of English, History, and Modern Languages and Literatures. The certificate offers students a depth and breadth of knowledge about computational approaches to humanities scholarship; the ability to clearly articulate their own methodological approaches to digital projects they complete; the ability to intervene in and discuss the larger theoretical debates that have shaped and continue to shape digital humanities scholarship; knowledge in multiple digital methods, digital tools, and project management skills that students may employ to answer research questions; and experience working in cross-disciplinary collaborative research teams.

Curriculum

Ph.D. students pursuing the certificate will take a minimum of three DH-focused and/or digital methods courses (9 credit hours). All students pursuing the certificate will be required to take the DH practicum course (MLL 774). Students may fulfill the additional 6 credits required for the certificate by taking two other DH or digital methods courses of their selection, either selected from the current MLL and ENG DH offerings or from those courses outside of the department listed below. The final requirement is the creation and approval of an online portfolio showcasing projects and research utilizing digital humanist methodologies.

Graduate Certificate in Second Language Acquisition & Teaching Certificate (SLAT)

The SLAT Graduate Certificate is an integrated group of courses designed to acquire expertise and experience in the field of critical studies of language, centering on theories of second language acquisition and bilingualism, empirical research in these areas, and their applications to the teaching of second and heritage languages at the postsecondary level.

Curriculum

Ph.D. students pursuing the certificate will take a minimum of three SLAT-related courses for a total of 9 graded credits. It is required to take MLL 701, “Intro to Second Language Teaching: Theory and Practice,” in addition to two other SLAT-related courses (for example, MLL 702, MLL 703, MLL 704). Students pursuing this certificate should consult with the SLAT faculty to determine which courses to take.

Studies. Graduate training in MLL prepares students to work as teachers and researchers of literary, linguistic, and cultural studies at universities and four-year colleges, as well as to serve in administrative, advocacy, and leadership positions in a range of educational and cultural institutions.

Goals

The Department seeks:

1) to train innovative and productive intellectuals whose work can contribute to the creation of more knowledgeable and just societies;

2) to help students prepare for fruitful and fulfilling careers in scholarship, research, teaching, community service, and related professions; and

3) to guide and support graduating students in the successful pursuit of academic or non-academic employment.

Student Learning Outcomes

- Graduate students should demonstrate a broad, critical understanding of literary and cultural forms, traditions, products, and processes from the geographies and time periods specific to their fields of study.
- Students working as Teaching Assistants will demonstrate the ability to teach innovative, well-crafted, well-received courses in language, literature, and cultural studies at various levels.
- MLL will equip its students as innovative and productive intellectuals, preparing them for fruitful careers in scholarship and research within and/or beyond the academy.
