

LLM IN INTERNATIONAL LAW

Overview

Today's legal practice and legal institutions are unavoidably multinational as the world has become more global and countries more interconnected. Legal rules that previously affected domestic matters are now often subject to the laws of numerous jurisdictions, which is why the understanding International Law has become more and more necessary. This specialization provides students with the background necessary to recognize, understand and manage problems arising in the international legal order, including: International Trade, Investment, Business, Environmental Problems, and Protection of Human Rights.

Students must complete 24 credits with a minimum grade point average of 2.30/4.00 and comply with the LL.M. writing requirement in order to receive the Masters of Law in International Law degree. Many students pursue different paths in reaching this goal. The exact number of courses taken depends on how many credits are associated with each course. Many students are most interested in our varied international and comparative law courses.

Specialization in U.S. & Transnational Law LL.M. for Foreign-Trained Lawyers

The International Law LL.M. allows students enrolled in the U.S and Transnational Law specialization to hone their specific interest with a choice of two tracks: the Experiential Learning Track and the Academic Track.

- Experiential Learning Track: Students who are on the Experiential Learning Track are required to complete one supervised, hands-on training experience in a workplace related to their area of study through (1) a pre-approved placement in the International Law LL.M. Practicum Program or, (2) Miami Law's Career Development Office Externship Program, or, (3) through a placement that a student secured him/herself and that can be converted into a practicum or field placement. Practicum/externship placements are part-time and range from 1-3 credits (i.e. 40-120 placement hours per semester). As part of the practicum/externship program, students are required to attend a number of on-campus lectures. Students participating in the International Law LL.M. Practicum or Externship Programs will be enrolled in the corresponding academic for-credit course (i.e. LL.M. Practicum I or II, Externship I, II or III) during the semester of their placement. Students on the Experiential Learning Track who are unable to secure a practicum or placement despite diligent efforts on their part may in exceptional circumstances fulfill this requirement by taking additional hands-on lawyering skills courses.
- Academic Track: Students in the International Law LL.M. who are on the Academic Track can fulfill all graduation requirements by taking general, writing or skills courses and are not required to complete hands-on training experiences in a workplace.
